I don't travel much, and I've never been to DC, so I basically have no idea what I'm doing. Hotel advice? How to not get beat up by Aunt Tifa? Anything would be helpful. (media4.giphy.com)

6 Don't stay out after dark and Aunt Tifa will leave you alone.
If you want easy as possible, fly into Reagan (not Dulles or BWI) and stay downtown near Congress and the Smithsonians

5 Your main worry won't be Antifa, but the local "Urban Youth" population (who are the majority of DC). Same rules apply there as in any other minority-White city; be careful when pulling cash out of your wallet in public, don't reveal jewelry/watches, don't walk around with your heard buried in a smart phone and then start looking around like you're a confused country bumpkin if and when you get lost. Plan out your route in advance and know where public transportation points are located. Go to Google Map's street view and check out the neighborhoods you will be going through in advance. You will be able to tell which ones are sketchy.

surprised the cane didn't break, but one of the pits legs did and the other got a concussion and was unconscious. If it worked on a pit Antifa wouldn't stand a chance. The only potential negative is a cane might make you an antifa target. We all know they tend to go after those they view as weaker. I don't know that may not be a negative.

4 Bring a pitchfork with a flag, at LEAST. Park farther away from DC the better. Take a bus, walk, get there early. Bring water. Prepare to fight. Keep your level of aggression one level higher than the police. Do not watch people get arrested, push the police or antifa back, pull our pede back behind the lines to disappear.

3 Travel in packs after dark. Keeping your flag (any kind) on a nice sturdy pole (approximately 4 ft long) with a good grip makes for a good shout out to good old Teddy Roosevelt (mine is oak, but hickory is a lovely wood.) Keep your Head on a swivel at all times and your ears pinging for activity (fast moving footballs heading in your direction). Other than that, stay hydrated and have a great time! Hope to see you there 😊

3 I've been there twice for big rallies. You'll never forget it!

3 Get a hotel in Alexandrria, VA if you can walk, its only 3.5 miles to the protest.
Aunt Tifa never shows their face when we are in numbers. They only come out at night.

3 Probably starts at Freedom Plaza next to the White House.

3 Find locals that are traveling and establish a cell.

2 Find like minded people and meet them in person before the 6th.

▼ While in person make detailed plans.

Anyone suggesting anything criminal should be treated as a traitor setting you up.

2 Stop worrying about Antifa. If you're worried about whether or not you're going to get beat up, you need to stick with people that are willing to kick ass if it is required.
